

Cigna Global Health Benefits appoints Neil Irwin as Head of Global Distribution

WILMINGTON, Del., 10 June, 2016 - Cigna Global Health Benefits® (NYSE: CI) today announced the appointment of Neil Irwin as Head of Global Distribution. In this role, Neil will be responsible for cross-market growth and development of Cigna's globally mobile group health business across multiple client and customer segments around the globe.

Neil brings a wealth of experience and knowledge to Cigna with a career-long track record of driving growth, championing excellence in customer service delivery and partnership with leadership to achieve superior performance. He spent more than 25 years with Marsh, Sedgwick and other leading industry firms with oversight of client management and business development across all lines of business including employee and health benefits, affinity, specialties, risk consulting and many others.

Having started his career in Scotland, Neil's experience spans multiple geographies, industries and client segments and in most aspects of the insurance industry. His career has given him insight into general management, underwriting, claims and his greatest passion and focus toward leading superior growth and client service delivery to all clients whether it be one of the world's leading companies, a small-to-medium size enterprise or an individual.

Before joining Cigna, Neil was Managing Director at Marsh and was responsible for developing client relationships and driving growth, strategic insurer relationships, marketing and communications in the Middle East and Africa. He previously led growth initiatives across all business segments in Africa, Europe, India and the Middle East.
